

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

For obtaining a print result of the image quality in which the color reproducibility is always stable even if receiving a printing job from any client computer, a first calibration control unit obtains correction data from a printer to store the data in a first memory, receives normal print information from a client computer, and corrects print data by referring to a correction table produced in accordance with the correction data when generating the print data based on the received print information.

2025 RELEASE UNDER E.O. 14176